Revols, Revolutions and Uprisings in the Middle East

Dr Vivian Ibrahim

Tuesday and Thursday 9.30-10.45am Croft 204
Office Hours: Tuesday 3pm-4.30pm or by appointment

Description:
This class will examine the causes, role and impact of various uprisings, revolts and revolutions in the nineteenth and twentieth century Middle East. The recent events of the so-called ‘Arab Spring’ has brought into question, why supposed change occurs, what the catalysts are, and whether there is an absolute break or continuity with the past. This course will place various historical and contemporary events within socio-political and economic contexts with the aim to question how meaningful it is to talk about ‘revolutions’ in the Middle East.

Learning and teaching methods:
Classes will consist of a lecture during the Tuesday and Thursday sessions as well as a mixture of class discussion, presentations and group work. It is expected that all students participate actively in the discussions, which form a crucial element of the course. Students are expected to make their contribution through regular class participation critically assessing the reading assignments, responding to peer comments, and discussing the ideas and arguments presented in class.

Each student will make at least one oral presentation based on topics and readings with the aim to encourage and facilitate debate. The oral presentation will be assigned in advance, and students are expected to make use of the required readings for that week. The presentation has to maintain a clear focus on the selected topic and offer a discussion of the relevant literature.

Marking/Assessment/Attendance:
1. Map Quiz, given on Thursday 24th January (5%)

2. Oral presentation, as described above (10%)

3. Midterm exam - given on Thursday 5th March (25%)

4. Class Participation (10%)

5. Project Paper on Arab Spring. Minimum length 3,000 words (25%)
   a. Draft outline with detailed summary of sections and full annotated bibliography due Tuesday 26th March.
   b. Full and final project due Thursday 18th April

6. Final Exam (25%)

Any submitted work that contains plagiarized material will receive an automatic 0%
Any work not submitted at the beginning of class will have 5 points deducted up to midnight of that day. Each subsequent day will result in a deduction of 5 points. Any work not fully spell checked and proofread will be penalized. In addition to a hard-copy, all work must be submitted electronically via "Safe assign."
